2.1. Background

On 2 April 2026 the term of the current Dutch judge at the ECtHR will come to an end. By letter of 11 September 2024 the Secretary General of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe invited the Dutch Government to nominate three candidates for the position by 11 August 2025. By letter of 25 September 2024 the Advisory Panel of Experts on Candidates for Election as Judge to the European Court of Human Rights ('Advisory Panel') invited the government to first submit its nominations to the Advisory Panel (by no later than 12 May 2025).

With that in mind the Minister of Foreign Affairs and the then Minister for Legal Protection initiated the procedure² created by their predecessors by order of 4 July 2023. Under this procedure they are sent a non-public list of recommended candidates, drawn up by a Recommendation Committee which, in the case of the present vacancy, consisted of the following members:

- Dr Dineke DE GROOT, President of the Supreme Court of the Netherlands (chair);
- Dr Rosa UYLENBURG, President of the Administrative Jurisdiction Division of the Council of State (member);
- Professor Nico SCHRIJVER, interim chair of the Netherlands Institute for Human Rights (member);
- Mr Jos SILVIS, former judge at the ECtHR and former Procurator General at the Supreme Court (member).

Since 1 September 2025 Professor Richard Lawson has been chair of the Netherlands Institute for Human Rights. As of that date he thus succeeded Professor Nico Schrijver as ex officio member of the Recommendation Committee.

Dr Nelleke Koffeman (Ministry of Justice and Security) and Mr Vincent de Graaf LL.M. (Ministry of Foreign Affairs) served as secretaries of the committee.

2.2. Procedure

The vacancy was published on 27 December 2024 on www.werkenvoornederland.nl, the website for announcing job listings for central government. Interested parties were invited to upload their CV and a cover letter. The deadline given was 10 February 2025. On 10 January 2025 a full-page advertisement for the vacancy, which contained a reference to the above-mentioned site, appeared in the law journal Nederlands Juristenblad (NJB) and also in the NJB's online newsletter, with a link to the official listing. A listing for the position was also published in early January on the website of the Centre for International Law of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and of the Council for the Judiciary. Finally, the vacancy was widely disseminated on LinkedIn, the online professional network.

In addition to announcing the job opening, as described above, the Recommendation Committee ('the committee') also notified people it felt would be suitable for and interested in the position.

In the first round a total of 13 people applied for the position, either on www.werkenvoornederland.nl or by directly emailing the committee. Out of that total of 13 applications, the committee invited five candidates (three men and two women) for an interview. In the committee's view, the other eight applicants (four men and four women) did not fulfil the requirement set down in Article 21, paragraph 1 of the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) that judges on the ECtHR 'must either possess the qualifications required for appointment to high judicial office or be jurisconsults of recognised competence', as it has been interpreted by the Advisory Panel.

On the basis of the five interviews, the committee drew up a recommendation on 11 March 2025 consisting of three candidates, listed in alphabetical order: Professor Sjoerd Bakker, [...] and Ms Corinna Wissels. On 25 April 2025 the Council of Ministers for the Kingdom approved this recommendation, and on 28 April 2025 it was submitted to the Advisory Panel. [...] The list was subsequently submitted to the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe (PACE) on 3 July 2025. Shortly thereafter, one of the candidates withdrew from the procedure for personal reasons. Consequently, the Netherlands' list of candidates was formally withdrawn on 22 July 2025.

Inquiries with the PACE secretariat revealed that as long as the list had not yet been published by PACE, the government was free to modify it. The Dutch list had not been published by PACE. The PACE secretariat confirmed that the two other candidates could remain on the list and that the third position could be filled by a new candidate, as long as that person had been interviewed in the course of the national selection procedure. There were only two remaining candidates who had also been interviewed as part of the national selection procedure. The committee felt that it was appropriate to readvertise the vacancy. The Minister of Justice and Security and the then Minister for Legal Protection were sent a memo to this effect.

The vacancy for the remaining place on the list was published on werkenvoornederland.nl from 6 to 28 August 2025. A similar notice was also published on the website of the Centre for International Law of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and widely disseminated on LinkedIn, the online professional network. In addition, the committee asked its secretaries to inform a number of individuals directly about the new vacancy.

In the further application round, a total of 13 people (seven men and six women) applied for the open place on the list. The committee invited three of those individuals for an interview (one man and two women). In the committee's view, the other 10 applicants did not meet the aforementioned requirements set down in Article 21, paragraph 1 of the ECHR, or at least not to the same degree as the three individuals selected for interviews. One of the three invited candidates withdrew from the procedure shortly before their interview was to take place. As a result, interviews were conducted with only two individuals.

2.3. Assessment by the Recommendation Committee

In assessing the candidates, the committee took the following requirements as points of departure:

- the above-mentioned requirements contained in Article 21, paragraph 1 of the ECHR, as interpreted by the Advisory Panel, and the other requirements enshrined in that Article;
- the ability to express oneself effectively both orally and in writing in at least one of the Court's working languages (English/French), plus at least a passive knowledge of the other language.³

Furthermore, the committee sought to determine whether the applicants had an in-depth knowledge of the ECHR and the areas of Dutch law that are relevant to ECtHR cases, including criminal law and immigration law. It also looked into whether applicants had relevant international work experience, whether they had a good awareness of the different legal cultures of the member States of the Council of Europe and whether they could be expected to operate effectively in such an international environment. In addition, the committee considered whether the applicants had a sufficient knowledge of and connection to the Netherlands' constitutional order, including the role of ECtHR cases in the Dutch legal system and administration of justice, and whether they had a vision of the tasks performed by and the functioning of the ECtHR, both now and in the future, and the way these things relate to the national legal order. Applicants were also assessed on whether they were capable of shouldering the heavy workload of the ECtHR. Finally, the committee assessed whether the candidates were willing to move to Strasbourg.

2.4. Recommendation

The government is obliged to submit a nomination list of three people, in alphabetical order, to the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe. At least one person on the list must be a woman. Because women are currently underrepresented on the ECtHR, the nomination list could also have consisted solely of women in this instance. The government's eventual nomination to the Parliamentary Assembly will consist of only the names and CVs of the three people in question.

3. To this end, the applicants' linguistic competence as claimed in their CVs was tested in the committee's assessment. In addition, during the interviews the applicants were requested to reply, in French, to a question asked in French about ECtHR case law. The applicants were also asked whether they felt competent to write draft judgments in English and/or French and to discuss their experience with drafting legal texts in those languages.

On the basis of the relevant documents, interviews with the applicants and other observations during the application rounds described above, the committee arrived at the following recommendation (in alphabetical order):

- Professor Sjoerd Bakker;
- Ms Tamara Trotman;
- Ms Corinna Wissels.

IV. Activities and experience in the field of human rights

In 2016 my family and I moved to Curaçao in the Dutch Caribbean after accepting an invitation to become an associate professor at the University of Curaçao Dr. Moises da Costa Gomez. Seeing the many differences in life and welfare conditions between the people of the Dutch Caribbean and the inhabitants of the European part of the kingdom of the Netherlands, I took a lasting interest in fundamental rights and their significance for the Dutch Caribbean and the Netherlands. I was by that time appointed by the co-deans of the law faculty of said university to conduct and co-ordinate research in the research programme "Fundamental Rights". Around and after my departure from said faculty this resulted in a faculty research volume on fundamental rights in the Dutch Caribbean (2019) and in articles by me on the relation between fundamental rights and good faith (2017) and on the impact of the 2016 ECtHR ruling in the Murray case on Dutch Caribbean private law (2020). Fundamental rights have since then played a distinct role in my publications and (university) lectures, whereby the focus is generally laid on their influence on the legal order, private law in particular, and on judicial decision-making. Publications of this period include an article on the banishing (wegcontracteren) of fundamental rights in contracts (2022) and a monograph on the influence of fundamental rights on Dutch property law and law of obligations (2023). More recent studies with a fundamental rights perspective were conducted on the subject of corporal coercion, the 'right to be forgotten' and the Jewish orthodox phenomenon of the 'Eruv'. On a regular basis I also contribute to publications by a group of Dutch Court Watchers in the Nederlands Juristenblad, where new ECtHR jurisprudence is presented by said group on a weekly basis. Moreover, I recently co-organized and presented lectures on religious pluralism and human rights at the yearly conference of the Dutch Council for the Judiciary (Raad voor de rechtspraak) in The Hague and accepted an invitation to contribute to an upcoming Nijmegen research volume on the application by the judiciary of ECtHR and CJEU rulings in Dutch law.

c. Description of non-legal professional activities

IV. Activities and experience in the field of human rights

My experience in the field of human rights is related to my professional experience working as European Law specialist at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and as a member of the Administrative Jurisdiction Division of the Council of State. As head-agent, representing the Netherlands at the EU Court of Justice, I cooperated with the agents, who represented the Netherlands at the ECtHR, in cases that concerned the interpretation and application of both the ECHR and the EU Charter of Fundamental Rights. I also gave advice on the EU accession to the ECHR (until 2013).

As a member of the Migration Chamber and the General Chamber of the Council of State, I rule in numerous cases, in which applicants invoke rights that are protected by the ECHR, such as articles 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 13, and article 1 of the first Protocol to the ECHR. In many of those cases, the EU Charter of Fundamental rights is applicable as well. I therefore have experience with the case law of both European Courts. As chair of the Committee on EU law of the Council of State, I advise on the interpretation and application of the EU Charter of Fundamental rights and the question to what extent the caselaw of the EU Court of Justice corresponds with that of the ECtHR. A member of the Constitutional law committee of the Council of State I advise on questions regarding the ECHR and the ECtHR's jurisprudence.

I have published on the EU Charter of Fundamental Rights and its application in the Netherlands (see VII Publications). At conferences, I gave presentations on the EU Charter of Fundamental rights (for example in Brussels, 10 years EU Charter of Fundamental rights) or moderated panel discussions on the principle of mutual trust (for example FIDE 2023, Budapest). Since 2025 I also teach the advanced course on fundamental rights in the European Union at the training centre of the judiciary in the Netherlands (SSR).
